This business being disposed of, a motion was made to proceed to the nomination of Chief Justice viva voce. Mr. Gills moved to lay the motion on the table, but the Convention refused to do so, by 147 mays to 78 yeas. The question recurring on the adoption of the resolution, a very animated dehate ensued, Messrs. James H. Howk and Timo-THY O. Howe opposing and Mr. Schubz advocating it. All three gentlemen spoke eloquently and well; the Convention listening 810 costs. o them with great interest and attention .--Finally, the resolution was adopted by 137 yeas to 83 nays, and the Convention immediately proceeded to vote for a candidate for Beck. Chief Justice, with the following result:

A Scott Stoan, of Dodge, 63 votes. J. H. KNOWLTON, of Rock, 31 votes. J. A. SLEEPER, of Rock, 22 votes.

Judge SLOAN, 158 votes. Judge Albert Smith, 25 votes. J. H. KNOWLTON, 29 votes.

Whereupon Judge Shoan was declared manimously nominated. The nomination is an nnexceptionable one; Judge SLOAN having already abundantly proved his fitness for Judicial etation.

The hour of midnight being reached, the eport of the committee on resolutions was aken up and adopted, and then, with three rousing cheers for WILLIAM H. SEWARD and three more for Judge SLOAN, the Convention adjourned sine die. Thus closed the proceedings of the largest, the ablest, and the most harmonious Convention I have ever attended thus closes: in this State. It is a gloric us omen for the campaign of 1860.

Madison, Feb. 29th, 1860. EDITORS OF THE SENTINEL:--In your paper of to-day I notice the following:

"From Madison we learn that the Supreme Court has rendered an important decision in the case of Carpenter w. Hustings. The Court bolds that the auditing of an account by the Secretary of State is final, and cannot be corrected, whether fraudulent or not. Carpenter thus secures payment of some $35,000.

It is not generally understood here, that writ the question will doubtless be finally setfully covered.

> SHOCKING CASTALTY—A BOY ELEVEN YEARS OLD SHOOTS HIS BROTHER'S HEAD OF.—It is seldom that we are called upon to chronicle a more lamentable or heart-rending affair than the following:—Saturday afternoon two sons of Rev. J. S. Weize, at Lithopolis, Fairfield county, were playing in a room of their father's house, when one of them, eleven years old, took up a gun which was standing in the corner, and playfully remarked to his brother, six years old, that he would shoot him, and leveling the gun, fired away, blewing the whole half of the little fellow's head off, killing him instantly. The older brother did not dram of there being a load in the gun, only raising it and leveling it in sport; but it was heavily charged with shot, and the aim was too true. Mrs. Weize was nearly frantic with her great grief, and the surviving brother was not to SHOCKING CASUALTY-A BOY ELEVEN grief, and the surviving brother was not to econsoled. The gun was kept loaded to shoot pigeons, as they flew over the village in large numbers.—Ohio State Journal, 27th.

> Health or Fond Du Lac.—There is more sickness and death prevailing in our midst at present, than we have had occasion to chronicle for a long time past. The diseases predominating are typhoid and intermittent levers, colds and throat distempers. The deaths have multiplied two-fold their usual numbers, mostly from exposure during the changeable weather and a want of care in its early stares; rather than from the violence of chargeans weather and a want of tere in its early stages; rather than from the violence of the disease, we apprehend. For the third time this week has the bell tolled the requem of a departing soul on it unward flight, and even as we write, another body is being consigned to its last resting place, another spirit exchanged this corruptible for incorruptible, and this mertal for immortality.—Common-its further consideration was postponed for three weeks.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the principal committees to employ one clerk each, at four dollars per day.

Mr. John Cochrane, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill for the better protection of females on the high seas. He caused to be read a memorial of the N. Y. Emigrant Committee, showing the abuses committed by captains and others on such passengers. The bill had the sanction of the Senate and two committees of the House.—The bill was read. It makes the violation of a female, or connection with her under promise of marriage, threats, or exercise of authority, or by solicitation or otherwise, punishable with fine and imprisonment. Further proceedings in regard to the bill were terminated by the expiration of the morning hour. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union.

The committee rose with the view of proceeding to the election of a Printer, it being the special order for to-day.

After some discussion it was agreed to postpone the matter until to-morrow.

Senator Declittle's Speech. The New York Tribune of Monday pays a fattering compliment to Senator DooLITTLE, referring to his speech in reply to Toombs. The Tribune says: "The speech of Mr. Doo-LITTLE, of Wisconsin, in the Senate on Friday, in reply to Mr. Toomes and in vindication of the action of the Supreme Court of that State in the BOOTH case, was a masterly performance. It was the speech of a lawyer and a statesman, and a complete demolition of the position of the vituperative and reckless Georgian. While Mr. Doolittle was able and thorough, both upon principle and authority, in his defense of the judiciary of Wisconsin, he was even more vigorous and triumphant in his exposition of the course of judicial decision upon the main points in controversy by the Supreme Court of Georgia, citing and commenting upon several instances in which that tribunal had set at naught, yea, actually spurned and derided, the judgments of the Supreme Court of the United States, even in matters where the latter Court had undoubted jurisdiction. If the enticle of Toomas were not tougher than that by that of the cock turkey, he would wilt and droop under the merciless scathing and ridiculing to which Republican Senators, one after another, are subjecting him for his bedlamite tirade a few weeks since. With their arrows sticking all over him, he struts around the Senate Chamber with as much seeming self-complacency as usual."

How often we hear men regretting—cld wet weather changes.

The hot, muggy atmosphere causes an intended in their younger days: but now they say it is too late—we should never eat the fruit. Such men have no thought of leaving the world any better than they found it, in this world any better than they found it, in this world any better than they found it, in this respect, and seem to be satisfied with their selfish reasoning, and continue to plow their fruitless and treeless farms till their land and

The Secate, at its afternoon session to-day, passed without objection the Assembly bill, providing for filling the offices of Judge and Cerk of our Municipal Court. The amendments to our City Charter have not yet been atted upon. The question of dividing our county, by setting off all the towns and invited the city by itself, is again agitated. The county delegates are said to be generally in favor of the measure. I doubt whether the towns would be the gainers by the change.

The delegates to the Republican Convention, which meets to-unorrow, are gathering repidity, and the botols are already overflowing. There is every probability of a full representation from all parts of the State. B. far set the selection of a Presidential candidate is concerned, the sentiment of the delegates is the Republicans of Wisconsin. less will do.

In Charleston, where he gave concerts, it was difficult to pursuade the ladies to leave after the regular performance was over. They would throng around the piano and player, saking questions, and playing difficult tunes for him to repeat. Tom, besides being a matchless performer, is a composer of the first merit; his music is "in his soul," not merely "in his fingers," Indeed it is difficult for him to repeat exactly the compositions of others, and he seems to find the fairest field for his islent in his own productions.

We append an interesting account of one of his concerts, taken from the Charleston Courier:

E. Goodrich on Potato Rot. The Rev. Channer E. Goodrich, in his lecture, considered the potato disease, in all its several relations, a branch of vegetation on which many years of practice enable him to speak understandingly.

The potato, in a state of nature, is found on the sides of the Andez and in the adjacent valleys. At the base of the mountains the tamarind, yam, and banana; the melon, corn, tomato, and pepper, come higher up; and above these is the belt where the potato thrives most vigorously, the climate being thrives most vigorously, the climate being equable, and the roots not exposed to the frosts. When the same varieties of potatoes, frosts. When the same varieties of potatoes, especially those which ripen at nearly the same time, are enlitivated together, they are variously subject to disease. Thus the old "Early Mountain June," "Early pink eye, or Dyckman," of the early kinds; and the Carter, and Western Red, of the late sorts, are peculiarly liable to disease.

If you plant alongside them, however, the imported rough purple Chili, the Garnat Chili, the Black Diamond, and the early Hartford, they show a much hardier constitution. And this difference, Mr. Goodrich thinks, is due to a vital energy, which may with occasional intervals of not more than with occasional intervals of not more than dive minutes, the following pieces: "Masonic Grand March," "Herculean Quickstep," "Then You'll Remember Me," with variations of his own; "Coralie Schottisch."—After performing the above mentioned pieces and several others, he improvised a most exquisite March. He then gave an imitation of the Church and the Hand Organ, and the dullest oar could not fall to recognize the imitation. He played the "Fisher's Hornpipe" and "Yankee Doodle" at the same time, with mavellous correctness, animation and purity.

In "Away with Melancholy," he executed the thrilling in superb style; and we are sure the the greatest pianist the world has ever known could not surpass this blind megro's rendition of the "Monastery Bells."

Many of our fair readers are acquainted with "Ripley's Grand March," and those who have learned this beautiful piece of music know something about the difficulty that meets them on the threshold. Tom played that composition last evening without the committing a blunder, and it was the second.

Rewards of Merit.—It has become customary to reward the ballies and would-be accessing sojourning in Washington whenever they give loose to their instincts and perpetrate outrages upon decency and individuals. Admirers of the grossest sets may be found, who, to mark their high appreciation of marity, generally web a presentation of a cane to the distinguished ruffan. GENTLENESS.

Pve thought of all this pride, and all this pain, And all the insolent plentures of power, And I declare, by this most quiet nour.

Which holds in different tasks by the Bre light, Bue, and my triends here, this delightful night, That ower itself has not one half the might Of gentlers. The want of all true wealth; The meser madman's torce, to the wise health; Blu meser madman's torce to the wise health; Blu meser madman's torce to the wise. Who must be arrival upon or wise they rise: The battle to the moon, who all the while, High out of hearing, passes with her smile; The tempert, trampling in his scarnly ron, To the whole globe, that basks about the sun; Or as all thricks and clangs, with which a spiere, Undern and fired, could rake the midnight ear, Compared with that vast dumbness nature keeps Throughout her starry deeps.

Most old, and mild, and awful, and unbroken, Which this a take of peace beyond whate'er was spiken.

THE SENTINEL.

[ Written expressly for the Daily Sentinel.]

TWENTY STEPS TO ONE WOMAN'S HEART.

[CONTINUED.] Miss On'ario looked on in undisguised as-tonishment. This was all unexpected, and it was some time before she knew how to retain herself sufficiently to answer:

"Young woman you are foolish. The treatment you have received must have infield your mind. I desire to befriend you; will you repulse me!"

"You desire to buy me over to your own

"Helven knows I need friends, but I ask nothing of you but mylliberty."
"And your liberty would be my imprisonment perhaps; at least my shame, if you keep your word?" "No doubt of it," answered Alice, sinking back upon the pillow. There was a pause in the conversation, during which Miss Tanin the conversation, during which Miss Tanglegrass walked the floor in a stately, but thoughtful manner. The stubborn character of the girl nonplussed her, and she hardly knew how to act. There was a struggle in her breast, and when at last she approached the bed-side again, it would have been difficult for the most acute observer to have announced her determination, from any indivision of her face.

announced her determination, from any indi-cation of her face.

"Miss Stephenson, I have wronged you and yours, as you say. I am guilty, you are innocent. I will not tempt you, nor seek to coerce you. You shall be nursed and re-turned to the world, and I will patiently sus-tain the consequences rather than add anoth-er drop to the sea of iniquity. It was long since I was thrown in contact with the pure and guiteless; you have touched an aid, al-most forgotten chord of my heart. I could wish that I were as you are." And Miss wish that I were as you are." And Miss Tanglegrass covered her eyes with her hem stitch to catch the damp emotion. Alice was interested. This was an appeal to her pity. Her woman's heart was not seared by misfortune, and she took the disengaged hand, saying: "Miss Tanglegrass, if you speak truly we may be friends."

Do you not despise me?
'No, you have undoubtedly been the victim of others; I cannot despise you."

There was a sob came from the cambric, as the woman leaned over the couch, and before she left the room Alice Stephenson felt assured that she had been instrumental in assured that she had been instrumental in opening a spring of penitence in one bosom. But when Miss Tanglegrass arived at the parlor below, Mr. Horatio Felix, who was reclining on the carpet, with an ottoman under his head, knew by the shutting of the door that the mission had failed.

"Strike me blind, but you might as well bombard me at once, Onte," said that young gentleman, feeling for his lavender. "What says the fair prisoner?"

"It is nonsause to think of ever gaining her. I detest her already for her very obstinacy. But she will never injure us, Felix, for she will never recover, if I am a judge of her health."

her health."

There was a peculiarity in Miss Ontario's method of saying this, which attracted the attention of her brother.

"Why, Onte! you don't mean—!"

"Why don't!? Does a desperate woman grow easily pasified in an emergency? Miss Stephenson is already sick; who shall predict her recovery? I have won her confidence she trusts me and I shell prescribe. dence, she trusts me, and I shall prescribe for her!" or her!"
"Strike me deaf! Oh, dear, Oh!" said
Mr. Felix. "Onte! Onte! be careful."
"Have you learned the whereabouts of

"Have you learned the whereabouts of Parigo?"
"No," answered the young man. "He left town yesterday, on some business of his own, probably."

"Well, all the papers are at his house, are they not ?"
"Everything, Onte."

Here we rose. The manuscript was laid away and the little party soon after retired. The next day Charlsey proposed to Mary that we should provide a luncheon and go away up to the top of the mountain, that overlooked the river back of the hollow, and finish the remainder of the story on the summit. The idea pleased her, and about nine o'clock we were ready to start. Halting at the Locusta' cate Risarche and her mother to Locusta Risarche and Locusta Risarche ordinate we were ready to start. Haiting at the Locusts' gate, Blanche and her mother joined us; and thus reinforced, we wound our way up the romantic sides of that rocky hill, from whose summit one looks over three counties.

"Why, it's a ghost arrangement, eh? something of the supernatural order?"
"No, there are valuable papers in the house which we cannot lose sight of, and as the house is left empty to-night, we thought it advisable to put a watch there, that is all. Will you go ?"

Wery well, meet mo at Charley, Able's after tea, and Pli take you over.

At the time appointed, Clinton, muffled in a shawl, for it was a damp night, and smoking a cigar, arrived at Able's Collec House.

Shortly after Greenway arrived in a cab, and they set out together, and must have been they drove up to a handsome row of stone front houses, and Greenway telling the cabman to wait for him, led the way up the steps. The house, like all the rest in the row, had an area in front with iron pickets along its edge leading to a basement, a cool vault under the sidewalk with two vault lights, and an iron piazza running along vanit under the sidewaik with two vault lights, and an iron piazza running along level with the stone doorway, that was reached by six or seven steps. All this Chinton noticed as he went in. It was dark, and after trying to light the gas in the hall, Greenway remarked that it was turned off, and sent the cabman for some candles. After getting the lights, they went through the hall, Greenway fitting the keys he held to the parlor doors, and opening them sufficiently to see that the apartments were handsomely furnished. Everything stood as it had been used. The piano, book-case, centre table, ottomans and tapestry.

They then proceeded up stairs, and Greenway gave Clinton the keys of the house, adding, "You may want to use them," and taking a brace of pistols from his pocket, said, "Keep those by you, they might be handy dings, 10 in may want to use them," and having a brace of pistols from his pocket, said, "Keep those by you, they might be handy you know, as there's no telling what might happen. You will find coal and faggots in the vault, I presume, if you wan't a fire. But on no account leave the honse. Linton and myself have chosen you simply because we thought we could depend on you, and the whole of this plot rests on the keeping of this house and its counts in here to night until Farigo gets back. Farther explanations at another time will make everything clear to you." Ed. then went down with him, saw him out, bolted the half door, and after hearing the cab roll away started for the vault to bring up some fuel. For, having provided himself with a bottle of spirits and a brunch of cigars, he meant to be as comfortable as circumstances would allow, and a fire was absolutely necessary to comfort on this occa-

Ed. was naturally of a fearless disposition, and had rather liked this adventure from the first, as something to tell of afterwards. But after walking up and down the parlors some time, and vainly trying to peer out into the street, for the blinds were fastened in some way, and the sashes nailed down, he began to feel a little uneasy, because Stansbury did not come. He had counted a good deal on his company and made no estimate of his ability to pass the night in the place actually alone. However, after waiting some time longer, he concluded he was not coming, and taking a sort of precautionary glance down the dark pavement stairway, he returned to the room above. It would be idle to say he was not startled, when, on opening the door, he found the light extinguished. His perceptive powers were not as deep as "Detective Buckets," perhaps, but he thought when he examined the fire that it had been disturbed in some way. The windows were sound. Not a light cracked, and the door was shut. How then became the light extinguished?

of cigars, he meant to be as comfortable as circumstances would allow, and a fire was absolutely necessary to comfort on this occasion, it being one of those raw, wet nights, peculiarly characteristic of New York. He found plenty of coal and kindling below, and carrying his candle up to the second story room he set about building a fire in the grate, whistling a variety of popular tunes, to take the chill off the darkness.

After it was burning finely he proposed to himself to go down and explore the other found, if possible, something to heat a little water in. Perhaps, too, Ed. was afraid he might not hear Stansbury up stairs, and having unbeknown to Greenway told that young man of the rendezvous, and made him promained to many the now waited to hear his signal and let him in. Leaving one of the keys, he started down again. It was purson contestly that led him into the parlors. THIS DELICIOUS TONIC, ESPECIAL-

Medical Profession and the Family,

Possesses those inventor medicinal properties, ["ouic and Dinretic] which belong to an OLD AND PURE GIN. The business of manufacturing sparious Gins, and offering them as beverages, under the titles, "Aromatic," "tiordist," "Medicated," ac., has become so common that the public are justly suspicious of Rearly everything that is offered under similar forms, and the trade has thus been brought into disrepute. It has remained for our house (established in 17.9 to o public oon dence.
